Still in a contract? 3 ways we can help.

Two-year contracts with hefty ETFs (Early Termination Fees) are a hassle! Keep in mind that all Solavei service is contract-free, so once you switch, you'll never have to worry about ETFs again. In the meantime, here are three strategies for dealing with the ETFs of other carriers when you switch to Solavei.

Option 1: Let Your FAB Pick Up the Tab

Did you know Solavei offers a Fast Action Bonus (FAB), which gives you the opportunity to earn up to $650 in your first 60 days?

By directly enrolling just 3 Trios (9 people) in Solavei service, you can earn $350 – more than enough to cover most ETFs. Enroll just one more Trio, and you can earn a total of $650*.

*Examples of potential earnings are for illustrative purposes only. Actual earnings from Solavei depend entirely on your own abilities and efforts. See http://www.Solavei.com/compensationplan for details.

Option 2: Consider Your Total Savings - and Ability to Earn!

Do you currently have unlimited voice, text and data – and how much are you paying for it?" Example: You're halfway through a 2-year contract, where you pay $100/month for your service. Most service providers will prorate a cancellation fee, so halfway through a 2-year contract, a typical cancellation fee for a smartphone will cost you around $200.

So, even if you pay a hefty ETF to your current provider, you could save hundreds of dollars by switching to Solavei – and, by sharing Solavei's message with others, begin earning money!

Option 3: Don't Cancel Your Current Service - Ride it Out

As a last resort, call your provider to see about reducing your current plan to the minimum amount until your contract runs out. Be sure this won't automatically extend your contract.

Do the math. The cost of that minimum plan plus the $49 a month for Solavei service may still be less than what you are paying now.
